The Cincinnati Commercial thinks the "ass" medal should have been made in the form of a dog collar.

The 62d anniversary of Susan B. Anthony's birth was celebrated at Indianapolis recently. This is the first time that this particular anniversary has been celebrated, and should settle a mooted question. The Chicago Inter-Ocean thinks the time may come when her birthday will be celebrated as Washington's is.

Collector Beard, of the Boston custom-house, in a recent paper on civil service reform, advocates promotion, but based upon "competitive service" rather than competitive examination. Mr. Beard is a reformer, but a practical one. He thinks that all the good offices in the custom-house should be filled by promotion of faithful officers rather than by the appointment of sharp politicians.

The Denver Tribune and Colorado Springs GAZETTE would do well to remind the people of the continued existence of Mr. Sargent. Otherwise, he might pass out of the popular remembrance.—Louisville Chronicle.

Mr. Sargent has just been appointed to the highest diplomatic position that President Arthur has yet filled. Mr. Chaffee is in Florida for his health.

It is quite evident that Arthur has made a mistake in Sargent's appointment. As the Commercial Advertiser puts it, "If Sargent was not fit for secretary of the interior, he was not fit to be minister to Berlin." He appears to have promised the position to Sargent and then have yielded to pressure from outside. The appointment may be viewed as an endorsement of Sargent, but is not a success.

INTELLECTUAL HONESTY IN THE MINISTRY.

The Rev. Dr. Washington Gladden, of Lenox, Massachusetts, who is well-known as a writer on the New York Independent, speaks in this way of his clerical profession: I wish to record my own conviction, drawn from a pretty extensive knowledge of journalistic methods, that the average editor is a little more fair and Christian in his dealings with truth than is his treatment of those who differ from him than the average parish minister.

We cannot say that we think this true. But it is a criticism that is based on a fair amount of fact. There is a certain amount of special pleading in the pulpit that does more harm than good. Broad generalizations are made from too limited an array of facts. Honest differences of opinion is not treated fairly or considerately. Many ministers affirm in a positive manner what they themselves doubt, because they think it should be believed. This latter failing is the greatest cause of intellectual dishonesty and trickery in the pulpit. Phillips Brooks sometime ago in an able address on the methods of treating modern skepticism in the pulpit laid especial stress on this. He thinks no minister should preach what he does not believe. If he has doubts, he should state them or else not preach on a subject about which he has doubt. There are enough positive truths vitally affecting the life about which there is no doubt whatever. These he can preach earnestly, impressively, and with profit to his hearers. Mr. Brooks in his own preaching is a splendid example of this. He preaches obedience to a Master rather than belief in a carefully formulated creed. To him disobedience is a greater sin than heresy. He teaches humility, charity, purity of life, nobility of purpose, gentleness, sincerity and honesty, rather than eternal punishment, predestination, the doctrine of the trinity or original sin. We don't mean to underrate creeds. No man who is intelligent should sneer at a creed. The word comes from the old practice of heading a statement of one's belief, at the risk of life, with the work credo, I believe, and was frequently not only signed in ink but sealed in blood. A word with such an origin is entitled to respect. But at the present day a man is judged more by his acts than his beliefs. Righteous actions are considered as better proof of a correct belief, than a correct belief is assurance of right acting. Hypocrisy is less prevalent where the church tests its religious life by its acts rather than its belief. The preaching of the great truth that men should follow and obey Christ will cause less objectionable heresy, than the preaching of doctrines which the preacher himself does not fully believe and to which his hearers will not honestly assent. The distinction here is vital and has been made clearer in the last few years. Spurgeon, Phillips Brook, John Hall and others who are among the most useful and influential—preachers of the day emphasize Christian life rather than Christian belief. Living epistles have been stronger arguments for Christianity than written epistles. The church has been weakest when it has drawn fine distinctions of belief and has been on the defensive when it has stopped to argue men into belief rather than doing it. It was strongest and most efficient in raising the tone of public morals and in diffusing the [illegible] by the wonderful results following the preaching of the monks in the middle ages, the great Puritan revival and later the great Methodist revival.

The criticism of Dr. Gladden at the beginning of this article indicates a want of intellectual honesty in the ministry, caused by what we think is doctrinal preaching. It is good in its place, but, above all preaching, should be fair, candid, and honest. It is because it is not, that it has caused the criticism made. Ministers have doubts like common mortals and their preaching should show it. The average preaching indicates that ministers have no doubts. The effect is either to make the average hearer discouraged because he cannot believe so much, or else destroy belief in the thorough honesty of the preacher. An honest doubt never imperils a truth. The preacher who doubts should not satisfy himself by tricky logic. He should not feel compelled to deceive himself or his hearers because the church has taught what he does not now understand or believe. The motive may be good, but its effect on the mind is disastrous. The intellectual dishonesty may soon affect the moral character. The need of the church today is to win greater respect and influence in the world is not simply that its preachers should have pure lives, which of course is absolutely essential, but that they should have that intellectual honesty which will make them fair and candid in their methods of argument, and honest in stating what they believe, and not what they want to believe, or what they think they ought to believe.

LITERARY.

ST. NICHOLAS FOR MARCH.

The circus is ever a fascinating subject to young people, and the second part of Mr. Stoddard's article, "Men and Animal Shows," in which he gives a vivid account of one of these amusement-venturers its travels, with its many elegant illustrations by James C. Shaw, Birch, and others, one of the most prominent and entertaining features of the March St. Nicholas. There is, also, for those who delight in the imaginative, a fairy tale by Thomas Dunn English, and some humorously decorative verses, illustrated with five clever page illustrations by Walter Satterlee. Poems are contributed by Rose Terry Cooke and Celia Thaxter. The present installment of "The Hoosier School-boy" is of unusual interest, detailing how Jack and his friends did go to school, spite of all odds, and giving a thrilling account of a foot-race, in which the hero runs for a five hundred dollar prize. "The Drummer-boy," in the Rifle-pits before Petersburg, and "Donald and Dorothy," in a novel fencing-match, still closely hold the attention of their friends. Mrs. Clement in her "Art and Artists" paper, writes of the painter Titian, and a beautiful reproduction of his famous portrait of himself forms the frontispiece illustration to the magazine.

The poet Wordsworth is the conspicuous feature of the "Treasure-box," and the "Letter-box" contains a full report from the president of the Agassiz Association. The illustrations in this number are exceptionally fine, and embrace work by Titian, Walter Satterlee, Allen Redwood, Douglas Volk, James C. Beard, Jessie McDermott, E. B. Bensell, Frank T. Merrill, J. G. Francis, George D. Brush, H. P. Share, R. B. Birch, H. Sandham, Miss R. H. Muller, and many others.

THE MARCH CENTURY.

The frontispiece portrait of Mr. Cable in the February Century is followed in the present number by a half-length of Mr. W. D. Howells, painted by Mr. F. P. Vinton, and engraved by Mr. W. B. Closson. It will doubtless be an acceptable feature to the thousands in England and America who, in the Century, are reading Mr. Howells' work for the first time. As far as this story, "A Modern Instance," has advanced it must be said that it is a fortunate introduction to a new audience: Mr. Howells is surprising his warmest friends by his unusual conciseness, rapidity, and intensity of method. In the present installment, Bartley deserts the logging-camp, and after dickering over the sale of his colt (a capital scene), leaves Equity, and, making a sudden resolve, is married. Mr. Howells's literary work is the subject of a readable and appreciative essay by Thomas Sargent Perry in this number.

As usual in this magazine, there is a decided prominence of timely or seasonable topics "Broken Banks and Lax Directors" is the subject of a paper of the widest commercial interest by John Burroughs, who describes exactly how the directors may keep the cashier from going to Europe. Mr. Burroughs has for years been a National bank examiner, and is familiar with accounts as well as with birds and poets. "Has Utah a Republican Form of Government?" is the question asked by Mr. A. G. Campbell, the anti-Mormon contesting delegate, who gives a substantial summary of the non-polygamous features of Mormonism which are the basis of the Gentile grievances. It is in a certain sense an authoritative statement of the situation from the point of view of those who are familiar with it, and have studied it closely. In "The Copyright Negotiations," Mr. A. G. Sedgwick contributes to the popular understanding of international copyright, and urges some practical and ethical objections to the treaty now proposed. The complicated Canadian laws on copyright are explained, and a strong plea is made for full and exact justice to authors.

The illustrated material is especially noticeable. Mrs. Mary Hallock Foote's third paper on Mexican life is entitled "From Morelia to Mexico City on Horseback." It is illustrated in a refined and striking manner by the author, a beautiful cut by Mr. Cole of a Spanish creole being prominent among the engravings. Mrs. Foote sees and describes Mexico as only an artist can. "A Ramble in Old Philadelphia" (Miss Elizabeth Robins) includes seven picturesque and delicate etchings by Parnell—a style of illustration which in the "Whistler," "Seymour Haden" and "Cape Ann" articles has become an agreeable feature of this magazine. Miss Robins' text takes us among the gypsies, with whom her companion, Mr. Charles G. Leland, talks in the Romany language. Mr. Leland also contributes to the article a curious belief in Romany and English—"To Trinall." Mr. Richard Grant White, in his first paper on "Opera in New York," in a readable style and with much interesting anecdote, traces the beginnings of the musical drama in America. Among the subjects of text and portraiture are Malibran, Mrs. Austin, Montressor, Formasari, Miss Paton, Joseph Wood, Dupont, and the old theatres. The paper has the color of the time of which it treats, and the series promises to be one of permanent value in the annals of music in America. Winter sports are the subject of two illustrated papers in this number; "The Black Bear," by Charles C. Ward; an experience bear-hunter of New Brunswick; and "The Danish Skate-Sail," by T. E. Hammer, who gives practical directions for the manufacture and management of this spirited means of locomotion, which will probably be adopted on American ice. A portrait of Leigh Hunt (engraved by T. Johnson) accompanies a wholesome paper by his friend, Mary Cowden Clarke, including some unpublished letters of the poet's. Some excellent architectural drawings of the Union League Club Decorations are given, with a short critical paper.

The unillustrated papers include a scholarly and unpartisan study of "Lord Beaconsfield," by Professor James Bryce, the historian and member of parliament, which is a solid contribution to political biography. It was Mr. Bryce who wrote the anonymous paper in "Scribner" a year ago on Mr. Gladstone. Under the caption "Bryant and Longfellow" are reprinted some early letters of the two poets, showing the literary relations existing between them of cordial good-will from the elder and of grateful obligation from the younger. "Brother Scoundrels," by Julia D. Whiting, is a vigorous character-sketch of New England farm life. In Mrs. Burnett's novel, "Through One Administration," the reader obtains characteristic glimpses of Washington life: a suggestion of the heroine as a possible member of the lobby, etc. The installments, which necessarily have been short, are hereafter to be longer. The poems of the number are by Margaret J. Preston, Mary W. Plummer, W. S. Smyth, David L. Proudfit, and Ella C. White.

"Topics of the Time" strikes into current discussion with articles on "Ghosts in our Foreign Policy," "Author-Rights," and "A Recent Social Phenomenon," and an ethical paper on "Kindness and Blindness." "Communications" include two letters on International Copyright (one an old one of Harriet Martineau's), "The Weak Point of Mormonism," "Honor to Whom Honor is Due" (a claim that Thaddeus Stevens and not General Garfield was the first to introduce competitive examinations for West Point applications) and some corrections by the Rev. Washington Gladden of his own paper on "The Increase of Divorce," which, it is reported, has been widely discussed in England.

Besides the book notices in "Literature," a series is begun in "Home and Society" on House-Construction, George Martin Huss contributing the first paper on Foundations—with ten drawings. "The World's Work" describes a New Steamboat and Engines, Electrical Steering Apparatus, White Slate, a New Tripod, Improvement in Stoves, and a New Water-Meter. "Bric-a-Brac" has the timely circular of "The Taste Supply Association (Limited)," by H. C. Bunner and Julian Magnus, and a variety of sparkling verse.

LITERARY NOTES.

Ouida's new novel, "In Maremma," is in the press of J. B. Lippincott & Co.

Mrs. Harriet Prescott Spofford is writing a short serial story for Our Continent.

Scribner & Welford have brought out a new edition of George Augustus Sala's "Paris Herself Again."

Mr. Froude's biography of Carlyle will be brought out in this country by Charles Scribner's Sons some time within the next two months.

That excellent journal, the Forest and Stream, has entered upon its eighteenth volume, and celebrates the occasion by donning a new and handsome dress.

In the March Wide Awake, under the title, "How I Entertained Two Little Girls," an old schoolmate of Miss Louisa M. Alcott will give some charming reminiscences of that popular author.

Anson D. F. Randolph & Co. will publish immediately "Saunterings in Europe," by the Rev. Charles Wood, of Albany. It is an account of a journey, broken by some months of study, through Germany, France, Holland, Switzerland, England, and Scotland.

Messrs. Houghton, Mifflin & Co. will publish an edition de luxe Longfellow Portfolio, being a selection of seventy-five artist-proofs from the original wood cuts, illustrating the new rubber portion edition of Longfellow's poetical works. Edition limited to 500 sets.

Estes & Lauriat will before long publish several books originally intended to be brought out this fall, but necessarily postponed to this season. Among these are Wilson Flagg's three books, "Halcyon Days," "A Year with the Birds," and "A Year Among the Trees."

Among the full-page wood engravings in the March Wide Awake will be drawings by Charles Volkmar—one of his famous duck paintings—and Mrs. Jessie Curtis Shepherd, together with an exquisite "aesthetic" picture by Miss Jessie McDermott, entitled "The Girl of the Period."

Houghton, Mifflin & Co. have republished a small edition of James Spedding's "Eros and Anteros," in American covers. The two volumes are devoted to a minute examination of the facts of Bacon's life in connection with Macaulay's well-known essay on Lord Bacon.

An account of the home-life of the Norwegian poet, Bjornson; an estimate, by Edward Everett Hale, of the late Dr. Holmes's "Uncle Benjamin;" and a brief paper in which Mr. Burroughs convicts Mr. Emerson himself of a tendency to indulge in superlatives—these are the "features" of the Critic of February 11.

In record of his recent visit to this country, the Right Hon. Dr. Lyon Playfair has prepared a paper on "The Industries of the United States in Relation to the Tariff," which will appear in the next number of Macmillan's Magazine. To the same number Mr. Thomas Hughes contributes an account of a "Seventeenth Century Worthy."

The extracts from the journals and letters of Caroline Fox, of Penjerrick, which have been published by Smith, Elder & Co., under the title of "Memories of Old Friends," and are to be republished in this country by J. B. Lippincott & Co., Philadelphia, make one of the most entertaining books of the day, and the volume is eagerly waited for by American readers.

The "Home and Society" department of the Century Magazine will be devoted, during the next three or four months, to a subject of great importance to home-life—the proper construction of [illegible] with especial reference to [illegible] are not fire, and the dangers to health arising from bad drainage, bad ventilation, and damp walls. The articles will be written by experts, and it will be made a special feature to examine into and expose defective plans of architects in the work of building.

At last the public has in process of work on it books which are authentic as well as good, and a traveller's story and something more. The new Mr. Henry Lansdell's "Through Asiatic Russia" is just fresh from the press of Sampson Low & Co., London, and bids fair to meet with what has been felt to be a great want on the reading world. Mr. Lansdell's specialty in Siberia was the spiritual side of its prisons and penal institutions, regarding them from a philanthropic and religious point of view. He believes himself to be the only English author who has ever traveled Northern Asia to the Amur, and the first foreigner who has ever been allowed to go through the Siberian prisons and mines. His given authorized statement of what he saw and heard in these prisons, and, incidental to this, his furnishing a large amount of information about the people and products of a country so little known in England or America.

PERSONAL.

Herbert Spencer is coming to America this summer.

Dakotah is applied for the position of assistant secretary of the interior.

David Dudley Field, of New York, is the oldest practicing lawyer in the United States. He is 87.

Joseph W. Harper, our new consul at Munich, is a son of the late Fletcher Harper, the New York publisher.

It is said that Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll is afraid that his enemies will report his dying words falsely, and so he has arranged that a stenographer shall take them down verbatim.

The Hon. Martin F. Conway, a member of the thirty-seventh congress from Kansas, died at the government hospital for the insane at Washington on Wednesday, in the fifty-third year of his age.

American girls who are in Europe studying music are advised by Jenny Lind to return home, where, she says, the instruction is just as good, and the chances of getting a nice husband much better.

To encourage drunkenness for the sake of a tax on the sale of liquor is certainly one of the most criminal methods of assassination, both used and sped by the craving of any age or country.—John Ruskin.

The walls of the draw-rooms at Senator Penrose's new house in Washington are hung with silk Chinese shawls, and those of the reception-room with crimson moreen cloth. The mantels are all of solid wood, handsomely carved.

E. Corbett, of Fairview, one of the largest landowners in the world, now farming a tract of 10 to 12 more than 500,000 acres, 50,000 of which are in Dakota, about 20,000 in Texas, 5,000 in Minnesota and various other tracts in all parts of the country. He says he lost $1,000,000 in the Chicago fire.

Lord Beaconsfield's Social Qualities.

James Bryce, M. P., in the February Century, says:

Of loyalty to his political friends he was a model, and nothing did more to secure his command of the party than its sense that his professional honor, so to speak, could be confidently relied upon. Toward his wife a warm-hearted woman older than himself and inferior to him both in birth and education, he was affectionately kind and indeed devoted. The first use he made of his power as prime minister was to procure for her the title of Viscountess. A story used to be told about, long ago when his political position was still far from assured, he and his wife happened to be with the chief of the party, and that chief so far forgot good manners as to quiz Mrs. Disraeli at the dinner-table not unpleasantly, but with a spice of satire. Next morning Mr. Disraeli, whose visit was to have lasted for several days longer, announced that he must leave immediately. The host besought him to stay, and made all possible apologies. But Disraeli was inexorable, and carried his wife off forthwith. To literary men, whatever their opinions, he was always ready to give a helping hand, representing himself as one of their profession. Success did not turn this head, nor make him assume the airs of a grand seigneur. In paying compliments he was singularly expert, and made good use of his skill to win friends and disarm enemies. He knew how to please Englishmen, and especially the young, by entering into their tastes and pleasures, and, without being what would be called genial, was never wanting in bonhomie. In society he was a perfect man of the world—told his anecdote apropos, wound up a discussion by some happy epigram, talked to the guest next him as he would to an old friend. In short, he was excellent company. But he had few talismans; nor did his apparent frankness unveil anything more than he chose to reveal.

Dr. Willis Lord went to Pueblo yesterday morning where he occupies the pulpit of the Presbyterian Mission today.

Mr. P. P. Farmer, the architect, left for New York via the Santa Fe yesterday. He expects to remain absent about two weeks.

The Rev. M. P. and Mrs. Webster, of Amherst, Mass., have arrived in town and will spend next summer with their daughter Mrs. S. L. Corliss.

We understand that money has been subscribed with which to purchase a complete set of Johnson's Cyclopedia for the reading room of the Y. M. C. A.

Mr. W. J. Briggs has received information that a rich strike has been made in a mine near Gunnison City in which he is interested. He left for Gunnison yesterday to look the matter up.

Major McAllister informs us that that he has at last secured a large number of the celebrated English sweetbriers for Cheyenne and White Smith, two years old, to which his friends are entirely welcome at cost. If application be made at once.

Quite a number of our citizens are in receipt of invitations to attend a ball at the Elk Mountain house, Crested Butte. Elaborate preparations have been made, and it promises to be by far the grandest affair ever held in the Gunnison country.

The city is again infested by a large number of tramps. They sleep in barns and outhouses during the night and beg from door to door in the day time. One resident on Weber street found two of them sleeping in his barn the other morning at ten o'clock.

The Literary club will hold a meeting Monday evening, February 27, at the rooms of the Y. M. C. A. Mr. Work will read a selection, and Mr. J. C. Kennedy will deliver a lecture. Subject: "The New Spain and Coronado Course Through It." The public are invited.

There will be a handicap foot race at the Pike's Peak Driving Park next Saturday afternoon for a gold and a silver medal. Ten entries have already been made in the race including several of the best runners in Colorado Springs. A rich treat is in store for those enjoying this kind of sport.

Capt. DeCoursey has just sold a cottage on South Tejon street for $2,250; also a 25x100 foot lot on South Cascade avenue for $500; a 2½ acre tract on Tejon street north of Columbia avenue for $750, and eight ten acre tracts near the fair grounds for $6,400. The captain has also purchased for himself the fine 200x190 foot lot corner Willamette avenue and Tejon street and a lot 75x160 feet on Nevada just north of Mr. Metcalf's.

A meeting will be held at Court House hall to-morrow night for the purpose of taking some action toward the organization of an athletic association. Every one interested in the establishment of an institution of this kind in Colorado Springs is invited to be present. The promoters of the project have worked hard to get it under headway, and it is no more than proper that they should receive some encouragement in their efforts.

Seats for the performance of "Esmeralda," by the Pueblo Philharmonic society, on Thursday next will be placed on sale at Howbert Bros.' book store Tuesday morning. Remember that this is a local organization and the cast of characters in the play is made up of many of the best people in Pueblo. They rendered the same play very successfully last week at Pueblo and will repeat it by request again on Friday night.

Grant Oyler, an eleven year old boy, was yesterday arraigned before Justice Bentley on a charge of incorrigible and vicious conduct. He has been living here with a family by the name of Wilcox, his mother being dead and his father absent from the city. He would steal, drink, and in fact was too utterly bad for anything. Justice Bentley sentenced him to a term of six years in the Reform school which he will be taken this morning by either Sheriff Smith or Deputy.

Mr. Thomas J. Fisher, of the solicitor's office, Denver and Rio Grande railroad, has been appointed by the governor of New York a commissioner for the state of New York to take the proof and acknowledgment of deeds and other instruments in the style of Colorado to be used or recorded in the state of New York. There has been need of such an officer here and persons wishing to convey or mortgage land in the state of New York, or acknowledge other instruments or swear to affidavits to be used in New York, will save themselves trouble by calling on Mr. Fisher.

OMAHA & DENVER SHORT LINE.

Its Convenience to Colorado Business Men.

Commencing Sunday, November 6, 1881, the Union Pacific company will run a fast Omaha express through between Denver and Omaha daily, over the recently constructed Julesburg cutoff:

Leaving Denver at.....4:00 p. m.
Arrive at Julesburg.....12:15 a. m.
Arrive at North Platte.....2:05 a. m.
Arrive at Grand Island.....5:00 a. m.
Arrive at Omaha.....8:30 a. m.
Arrive at Council Bluffs.....8:45 a. m.
Arrive at Chicago.....4:30 p. m.

Thus, Denver to Omaha, twenty three and one-half hours; thence Denver to Chicago, forty-six hours.

This new route is 166 miles shorter than any rival, six hours the quickest to Omaha, seven to fifteen hours the quickest to Chicago, St. Louis and all points east, and it runs the finest trains ever built—constructed by the Pullman company expressly for this line. They embody every feature of safety, convenience and luxury yet attained in railway equipment. It is the only through line possessing a water grade across the plains (averaging less than ten feet to the mile). It is the most picturesque route, has the best dining stations, the heaviest steel rails, best iron bridges and most careful ballasting.

Passengers from Leadville, Gunnison, San Juan, and all points in southern Colorado make close connection in the Union depot, Denver, and arrive in Chicago and all eastern cities so as to have a full day for business on the day of arrival, practically saving from twelve to twenty-four hours, and avoiding all transfer changes.

Meantime the old Kansas Pacific route, now Kansas division Union Pacific railway, to Kansas City and all points east and southeast, and the Pioneer Union Pacific route from Denver, via Cheyenne, to Omaha and the east and northeast, maintain their usual standard of excellence. Tickets via Cheyenne are good over the new route or vice versa. 1-24-tf
